WAR WATCHES

NOTE—A special discount of 20 per cent will be allowed to all proceeding on active service.

THE CAMPAIGN WATCH.

We have been suppliers of watches for use in time of War, for the past half century nearly. and it is back to The Afghan War that we can trace our name as being the original suppliers of The Campaign Pocket Watch. A strong, durable and accurate marker of time, whose name other dealers have since thought fit to borrow, thus sincerely flattering us.

MILITARY MODEL WRIST WATCH.

The best handy timekeeper for Officers of all grades when on active service is The Military Model Wrist Watch. Round in shape and protected by a leather wristlet, it can be referred to quickly, and unlike the Fancy Wristlet Watches which sit on straps and are ornamentally suitable for private life, this model is essentially strong and it is impermeable to rain, dust or perspiration which attacks the polished steel parts. The ordinary wrist watches are quite suitable for District work but The Military Model is THE WATCH for WAR use being DURABLE and ACCURATE under extreme climatic conditions.

Nickel Rs. 32, Silver Rs. 37-8, Gold Rs. 160.

THE "IDEAL" WATCH.

May be termed an open watch. It looks neat, light and attractive; sits close on the wrist and is the watch par excellence of its kind on the point of quality.

Nickel Rs. 32, Silver Rs. 37-8, Gold Rs. 160.

THE IMPERMEABLE WATCH.

Gives you protection from rain, dust, perspiration because it has a screw out movement. Obviates risk of every kind.

ALL-INDIA WEATHER.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

SIMLA, Sept. 18.

The depression has moved from south Rajputana to north-east Rajputana and is likely to strike the hills of east Punjab to-night. It has given a very heavy rain in south-east Punjab, west United Provinces and south Gujarat. The temperature is low in the region of rainfall.

Rainfall has been nearly general in Assam, west United Provinces, east Punjab, east Rajputana, Gujarat, Central India west, east Central Provinces, Konkan and north Hyderabad; local in Orissa, Chota Nagpur, east United Provinces, west Central Provines, Bombay Deccan and Madras Deccan. A few falls also occurred in Burma, Bengal, Bihar and north Madras coast.

The principal amounts are:—Dibrugarh and Tezpur one inch, Silchar and Cherrapunji two, Cox's Bazar and Daltonganj one and a half, Agra three, Bareilly two, Meerut six, Roorkee eight, Dehra Dun and Mussooree four, Chakrata five, Mukteswar ten, Delhi six, Hissar one, Ambala and Ludhiana four, Simla one and a half, Ajmer and Deesa one, Mount Abu one and a half, Rajkot four, Veraval five, Surat six, Ratnagiri and Karwar one, Marmagoa and Waltair two.

Forecast:—Probable decrease of rain in south Gujarat and heavy rain in east Punjab, west United Provinces and increase in Bengal.

STANDARD BAROMETER READING.

The following information is published in order that vessels in the Bombay Harbour may by comparison with a standard instrument, ascertain the errors of their barometers:—

The reading of the Standard Barometer at the Colaba observatory corrected for index error and reduced to 32 deg. F. and to the level of the tide, at 6-45 a.m. Standard Time on the 18th September 1914 was 29·95 inches. For temperature corrections applicable to mercurial barometers of ships the reading of the ship's barometer has to be increased or decreased by 0.18 inch. for every 5 degrees according as the temperature of the attached thermometer is respectively below or above 32 deg. F. In case of the aneroid no temperature or correction is needed. But for comparison at 32 F. all aneroid reading should be increased by 180 inch. For correcting the ship's barometer either mercurial or aneroid for the height of the barometer cistern above the tide level in the steam at 6-45 a.m., Standard Time, the ship's barometer reading should be increased by 0.10 inch. for every 10 feet of the height to make it comparable with the observatory barometer reading given above.

PRACTICAL PRESCRIPTION AGAINST STOMACH ACIDITY

BY A SPECIALIST.

"Nine-tenths of all cases of stomach trouble nowadays," says a leading specialist, "are caused by too much acid. In the beginning the stomach itself is not diseased, but if this acid condition is allowed to continue the acid is very likely to eat into the stomach walls and produce stomach ulcer or cancer, either of which may render a radical surgical operation necessary, even to prolong life. Therefore an acid 'stomach' is really a dangerous condition and should be treated seriously. It is utterly useless to take pepsin and ordinary stomach tablets. The excess acid must be neutralised by the administration of an efficient antacid. For this purpose physicians nearly always recommend taking half a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little water after each meal. Large quantities may be used if necessary, as it is absolutely harmless. But be sure to get the bisurated magnesia, as other forms of magnesia have not the same action in the stomach as the bisurated, and frequently do more harm than good."

NOTE: The above-mentioned ingredients may be obtained from any chemist, or direct from Kemp & Co., Ltd. of Bombay.

General Remarks.—The storm has moved northwards, being central to-day over Hissar, and has caused widespread and heavy rain in the east Punjab. Rainfall has, however, decreased considerably in the United Provinces and Central India West and to some extent in Rajputana and has become light and local in the Central Provinces. The secondary depression has given heavy rain in Gujarat and Kathiawar with the exception of the extreme western districts and has moved northwards into Rajputana and rainfall will in consequence decrease in those areas. Precipitation has practically ceased in the southern half of the Peninsula and been local in the Bombay Deccan and Hyderabad but has been nearly general in the Konkan, the fall's today being heavier between Ratnagiri and Karwar. The original storm may move into the hill to-day.

Nearly general rain is likely in the east Punjab, fairly general rain in the north Punjab, east Rajputana, Gujarat and the Konkan and local rain in the United Provinces, Central India West and Kathiawar and some showers in the Central Provinces and the Deccan and Malabar.

Private cables received to-day report that the liquidation price for Jan. Feb. contracts in Liverpool has been reduced to 5.50. Messrs. Weld & Co., have received a cable confirming the above, ann also giving the liquidation price for January Egyptians as 8.10, and stating that The New York Cotton Exchange has reduced the price for December delivery to 9.50. Reuter's Cables give spot mid 4.80 (i.e. 20 points lower) and Jan. Feb. 5.50 (i.e 20 points lower.)

Our market here improved during the week and there has been more business doing for forward delivery. An enquiry from Japan shippers sprang up, and export and commission houses sold some lines of Oomras and Bengals for January delivery. The demand ran on Hinganghat, Nagpur and Khamgaon styles. In the bazaar local speculaters covered good Broach and fully good Bengals and prices advanced Rs. 10 to Rs. 12. Last Friday good Broach was quoted Rs. 209 and the highest price since touched was Rs. 221. Other descriptions were about Rs. 10 higher. Yesterday good Broach opened at Rs. 218 and declined to Rs. 215. The market is now irregular and the demanded has fallen off somewhat. This morning good Broach opened at Rs. 215 and fully good Bengal at Rs. 146. We give below the closing rates for some descriptions.

The demand for ready cotton also improved and a moderate business was done for export to Japan. Local mills have also been buyers. There has been no change in the prices fixed for ready business, and sales have been made on the basis of class with mutual allowance on survey. This system is working satisfactorily and benefits all parties concerned.

During the past week there has been more or less heavy rain over the entire cotton area, and locally the rainfall has been excessive. Slight damage is reported in parts of the Berars and Central India, and some resowing will be necessary in the Dhollerd districts. Owing to rain in the United Provinces arrivals of "Kuppas" in the up country markets will be delayed, but this is rather favourable than otherwise as early cotton is not required here. The weather report to-day shows heavy rain in the Punjab (Ambala 3.75 inchs Delhi 5.83 inches) and Guzerat Kathiawar (Surat 5.73, Rajkot 4.49 and Bhavnagar 4.11 inches.)

LOCAL YARNS.

The market continues dull and beyond a few sales of a retail description there is nothing doing. The China markets are quiet and the unsold stock there shows little decline. There is little change in prices locally.

HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

OLD OFFENDER SENTENCED.

(Before Mr. Justice Davar and a Jury.)

EMPEROR v. GOVIND PURSHOTUM.

The accused, an old offender, was committed to the Sessions on a charge of theft under Section 378 of the Penal Code. Mr. Hormazdiar P. Dastur appeared for the prosecution. The facts were as follows:—The accused went to a chawl at Grant Road at 6 p.m. and inquired of one Chandrabai, living in a room in that chawl, whether any Canarese people lived there. Chandrabai answered that there were some Canarese living on the second floor. The accused went up and immediately after returned to the ground floor; not seeing Chandrabai he removed a sari belonging to her and a dhotar belonging to her son, from a line on which they were being dried. A young son of Chandrabai, who saw the accused removing these things called his mother, and the accused threw away the sari and ran away with the dhotar under his arm. The accused was arrested by the policeman on duty.

The jury returned a unanimous verdict of guilty, and His Lordship, in view of the eleven previous convictions, sentenced the prisoner to five years' rigorous imprisonment.

RE-TRIAL ORDERED.

EMPEROR v. HUSEIN AHMED.

The accused was committed to the Sessions on a charge of theft under Sec. 370 of the Penal Code. Mr. H. P. Dastur appeared for the prosecution.

The accused it was alleged, went to Dr. Nayan's dispensary in Kika Street on 29th August, at 6 p.m. Krishnaji Gopal, the compounder, was talking with the Doctor, when the accused entered the dispensary. Krishnaji saw him enter, and remove his umbrella, worth Rs. 1-8, from behind the counter where it was usually placed. Krishnaji came out and immediately taxed the accused with the theft of his umbrella. The accused was confused and inquired of Krishnaji whether it was really his umbrella. The accused told him that he had picked it up from the ground floor. The accused was then handed over to the police. The defence of the accused was that the umbrella was his.

Three or four witnesses gave evidence on behalf of the accused to the effect that the accused carried a similar umbrella like the one in question.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty, by a majority of 6 to 3. His Lordship disagreeing with the verdict of the majority discharged the jury and ordered a retrial before another jury on Saturday.

OFFENCE AGAINST A CHILD.

EMPEROR v. RAMCHANDRA BALKRISHNA.

The accused was committed to the Sessions on the 4th of September on a charge of rape or attempt at rape.

Mr. Azad appeared for the prosecution.

The facts of this case are very simple. One Balubai, a Hindu woman used to live with her husband and her young daughter aged 6 in a chawl at Kamatipura Lane. On the 26th August, the accused called her girl Ansuyabai to his room and committed or attempted to commit rape on her. Four days afterwards the young girl made a complaint to her mother and the police were communicated with. Evidence was then led on behalf of the prosecution.

The jury returned an unanimous verdict of guilty against the accused on the charge of attempt at rape and of not guilty on the charge of rape.

His Lordship sentenced the accused to three years' rigorous imprisonment and in passing sentence his Lordship said that the jury had properly acquitted him on the first charge of rape and had convicted him on very clear evidence on the charge of attempting to commit rape. This offence was punishable by a term of five years' rigorous imprisonment, being half of the maximum sentence for rape. His Lordship took into consideration the fact that while attempting to commit this crime he had desisted in time and had inflicted no injury on the girl. He had attempted this offence in the belief that he would cure himself of a chronic disease and thereby communicated a filthy disease to a child of six. Under the circumstances, his Lordship said that he could not pass a lesser sentence than three years' rigorous imprisonment on the accused.

ALLEGED BIGAMY.

KING EMPEROR v. TAIBAI.

The accused in the case was charged under S. 491 of Indian Penal Code for the offence of bigamy and committed to the sessions by the Second Presidency Magistrate.

Mr. Velinkar appeared for the Crown.

Mr. Belfour appeared for the accused.

Mr. Velinkar in opening the case for the Crown said that the accused was charged with the offence shortly described as bigamy. The facts of the case were very short. This woman was married to the complainant, Gainoo about ten years ago. She was about 18 or 19 years old now and must have been 8 or 9 years old when she married the complainant. The father of the accused however stated that she was only 3 or 4 years when she married. The jury would have to decide between these conflicting statements as to which of the two was true. After her marriage with the complainant the accused lived with him for about two or three years. There was no child of the marriage. About this time the complainant married again. The complainant was a "Mang," a very low caste among the Hindus, in which a plurality of wives was allowed. After his second marriage both the wives began to quarrel and in April last the accused's uncle fetched her away to her father's house. According to the complainant Gainoo, he went two or three times to bring her back to his house but her father would not allow her to be taken back.

On the 8th of June this woman came back to Bombay with a man named Gajaram whom she afterwards married by "Mohtur" marriage. Enquiries were made and as a result of these inquiries both the accused and Gajaram were put before the Second Presidency Magistrate who discharged Gajaram and committed the accused to the sessions on the charge of bigamy under S. 494, I. P. C.

The husband of the accused was the first witness examined for the Crown and deposed to facts as outlined by the counsel for the Crown.

The second witness was the father of the accused. In the course of his cross-examination by Mr. Balfour he said that there was a custom among the "Mang" caste that if the wife was not maintained for two or three years or was harassed by her husband, a woman could take another husband. There were many cases in the caste like that. He further said that the complainant had refused to take his daughter back when asked to do so by the "Jamat". The "Jamat" considered her as "chor-chittee" and said that as the husband had refused to take his wife back and maintain her, she was free to do anything she liked.

Bapoo Mahadeo, another witness for the Crown, deposed that he was a Mang and an engine driver in the service of the G. I. P. Ry. He was authorised to perform Mohtars under orders of the Jamat. He performed the Mohtar of the accused on her saying that her first husband was dead. Questioned as to the custom in his caste the witness said that the custom of his caste was that if the first wife was wholly deserted by the husband she could perform "Mohtar."

After several other witnesses were examined for the Crown the statement of the accused made in the lower court was read by the Clerk of the Crown. In that the accused said that since her marriage she was not maintained by her husband. He would not take her to his house from her childhood. Hence she married again.

At this stage the Court rose for the day.

A female pilgrim, who is a native of Bokhara, begged Her Excellency Lady Willingdon to accept as a present and old China tea-pot from her, which Her Excellency smilingly accepted. Before their departure, their Excellencies were garlanded by Mr. Edwardes, and the Trustees of the Mussaferkhana.

BOMBAY AMUSEMENTS.

THE BANDMANN OPERA COMPANY.

As will be seen by our advertising columns this Company will open a short season at the Excelsior on Tuesday the 29th inst. Many of London's latest musical comedies will be seen for the first time in Bombay, whilst a representation of the popular Pavilion Revue, "Step this Way," will also be given.

The attraction for the first two nights will be "Oh—Oh—Delphine," which scored such a hit at the Shaftesbury Theatre, and this will be followed by two performances of "The Marriage Market," which has only recently been withdrawn from Daly's Theatre, after a run of nearly eighteen months. The week will be closed by a revival of the ever-popular musical comedy, "The Balkan Princess."

Monday and Tuesday of the week following will see the Revue staged, and it is safe to predict a crowded house, as this is one of the most popular of the recent Bandman productions.

The company with one or two exceptions is practically new to Bombay. The leading lady is Miss Winifred O'Conner, an artiste who has only recently joined the company and who has come out specially by the kind permission of Mr. George Edwards. She has scored a very striking and brilliant success in Calcutta. Miss Nellie Lomas and Miss Babs Kendall are both new to Bombay audiences, whilst that sterling artiste, Miss Addie Lennard returns to delight her many admirers.

Of the men, Mr. Jack Elagert now takes the lead, and able support is forthcoming from Mr. Eric Langham and Mr. Clive Leighton, whilst Messrs Fred Coyne and Edward Granby renew their acquaintances with the Bombay theatre-goers.

Mr. Bobbie Roberts returns as the principal comedian, and needless to say scores many laughing successes. He is ably seconded by Mr. Jimmie Hooper, who has more than "made good," as the Americans have it. In the hands of these two capable comedians the company is very well served and the audiences are always certain of a refined type of comedy.

Mr. Roy Smith is still the manager-in-chief, whilst Mr. Gordon Stamford is Musical Director.

The plans are open to-day at Messrs. Rose & Co., where seats will be reserved in priority of application. This will be the company's farewell engagement, as they proceed direct to England at the termination of this short run.

AMERICA-INDIA CINEMA.

For this week's bill of fare the management have arranged what may be called a "Triple Entente" programme, as it contains pictures depicting famous events in English, French and Russian history. There are two historical dramas. The first is "A Tudor Princess," being a stirring romance of the times of Henry VIII. This fine drama has been produced by the famous Edison Coy., and the leading part is taken by that world-renowned actress, Miss Mary Fuller. The second drama is "Victoria Cross," a fine production both from an educational as well as spectacular point of view, depicting in a realistic manner that well-known event in the history of the Crimean War, "The charge of the Light Brigade." A new series of "Animated Cartoons" and a couple of comics make up an altogether delightful programme.

THE OLYMPIA.

Commencing from to-night, at the Olympia Picture Palace, will be shown a very sensational picture entitled "A Fight for a Fortune." The film is an "exclusive right" one, secured at great expense. It is full of startling situations and should be seen. There are numerous other attractive pictures.

WEEKLY HEALTH STATISTICS.

THE BOMBAY CHRONICLE.

LOSS OR GAIN.

It is impossible to forecast what may be the ultimate balance sheet which each of the belligerents will present to the people at the close of the war. At present it is pretty fairly estimated th. leaving Belgium alone, the four great Powers are incurring a monthly expenditure of [illegible] millions sterling, say 40 millions [illegible] by Germany and Austria, 35 millions by France and 30 millions by England. Five months of hostilities commencing from August, and ending in December would signify an aggregate expenditure of 750 millions. To this will have to be added all charges incurred for war outside the battlefield. Then, there are the losses by the partial or total cessation of inland and foreign trade, those entailed by the sinking of battleships, cruisers and all other naval transports; the charges for the replacement of all sorts of battered armaments unfit for further use; those for replacement of horses, motors and so on; the amount to be paid to private Railway Companies for conveyance of troops and supplies and for repairs and damages to rolling stock, and compensation for disturbance of normal traffic; and lastly, a variety of miscellaneous charges. Thus, the war bill to be footed by each of the belligerents will swell to proportions colossal in their character. The amount will be apart from the deplorable waste of food materials, ammunition, etc., during the continuance of the war itself. Even when all these burdens are summed up by each of the belligerents, there will still remain the unknown quantity of the loss of ordinary agricultural production, the profits of trade and shipping, and lastly, the economic loss by reason of the diminution in population which is a great asset by itself. Arms and ammunition, battleships and transports, may be soon replaced. Food supplies will no doubt be forthcoming, but the aggregate cost of enhanced prices of food for the nations will have to be computed in terms of pounds, shillings and pence.

All these and many other utilities of a people will soon be replaced after normal peace conditions are established. But how can the population destroyed be replaced? That cannot be done in a day. We in India, know from our experience of the appalling mortality from famine and plague during the last fifteen years that the average increase of the population in this country, which but for plague and famine might have been fairly expected by the expert demographists has not yet been reached. But the Indian birth-rate is certainly not so bad as that of England and France or Germany and Austria. Experts in vital statistics inform us how far there has been a diminution in the annual birth-rate in England. As to France it is notorious that not only is the rate slow, but stationary. Germany, owing to her rapid industrial prosperity, has a more favourable birth-rate though according to the latest statistics, there has been an apparent tendency towards a decline. It is evident that the loss of life which each belligerent nation may suffer in the war cannot be made up in a single year, nor even in ten or fifteen years. The diminution of the able-bodied population, capable of bearing arms, being an absolute fact, industrial and agricultural operations are bound to be retarded. In other words the economic laws will assert themselves, and enhance wages which in turn must endear prices. Again, there will be a considerable preponderance of the female sex, married and unmarried. There will be thousands of widows, and there will be thousands of spinsters. Necessarily, till a fairly proportionate ratio of males is to be found, marriages will not be numerous for some years to come. Want and woe will be the prevailing economic aftermath in many a family which may have lost its bread winners. These cannot spring up like mushrooms. Public and private benevolence may to a certain extent mitigate that distress. But such benevolence will be in another shape a burden on the treasury of the State and the pockets of those charitably inclined. Thus the economic loss which will be felt till the population reaches its normality will be incalculable. It can hardly be connoted or materialised into pounds, shillings and pence. And yet if a balance sheet, as complete as it is possible to devise, is to be presented by each of the belligerent nations, all these items of loss, seen or unseen, will have to be taken into account. Those nations which are the least hit in war, as we hope the English and the French will be, may be no doubt able to show a more favourable balance sheet than those most prostrated and exhausted by this horrible conflict. All the same the presentation of loss and gain can hardly be completed. It can only be imagined. Even that is not all. Each of the warring States will have again to put its house in order, so to say. In other words it must so recuperate itself as to be able, as rapidly as possible, to place the country's offensive and defensive resources on a basis acquired by the latest experience, bitter and bloody as it will be. Germany, specially, will take years to restore her lost foreign trade, however she may, owing to her productivity, be able to replace her army. Then the burden of the new debt by way of interest charge, on the loans which will have to be inevitably raised, will be another item of State expenditure in the future. When the normal budget comes to be prepared the first year after peace conditions are established, the Chancellor will have necessarily to increase taxation, which may last for some years, if meanwhile all goes well and no trade or industrial depression prevails, and no scarcity of money now and again overtakes the State.

All these are heavy sacrifices, which will have to be borne. They will be incalculable and unthinkable. These will no doubt be material sacrifices. But what may be the gain? That again is a great problem. Probably, the moral gain to the nation may be the chastening lessons this terrible war may teach. The powers of national endurance to resist great calamities in defence of the country will undoubtedly increase. The flame of patriotism will burn more steadily. Thrift will be greatly exercised, as with the French after the unlucky war of 1871 and the intolerable indemnity paid. Other minor virtues will be better exercised. Education of a Spartan character, will, it is to be presumed, be in greater vogue. Science will have greatly advanced a stage, but of a mixed character. She will invent many a beneficent art of peace. She will quicken the pulse of industrialism even at a faster pace than hitherto, inducing vast prosperity; but she will also invent the arts of war, those undesirable "resources of civilisation." Whether the world will be the wiser and better for the chastening effects of the conflict or whether it will jog along as it has for the last 5,000 years and maintain those "eternal verities" which the Sage of Chelsea has so graphically described is a problem. The cynic will be entitled to put the question "Cui Bono?" Will there be progress in the real sense of the word? Will there be greater happiness in the world, and a proportionate diminution of misery, want and woe? Lastly, will the barbarism of the brute creation be expelled from the human body? Who then may count the losses and the gains? That is a world-wide problem.

Notes of the Day

The Emden's Exploits.

The news of the exploits of the German cruiser Emden in the Bay of Bengal which was delayed in transmission to Bombay came upon the city yesterday with startling suddenness, although a message from Rangoon two days before, which stated that orders had been issued by the Admiralty that no shipping was to be allowed to leave Rangoon westwards, was evidently in relation to the proximity of the German vessel. During the four days she prowled about in the Bay she did considerable damage and, for the present at least has managed to escape. Her capture, however, should be at the most a matter of a few days. How the Emden came up the Bay without being sighted is more or less of a mystery. It is known that there are several German armed vessels looking after Germany's possessions in the Southern Seas,—the Solomon Islands, Samoa, and in New Guinea. It is not unlikely that the Emden was one of these. It was rumoured some time ago that a few German vessels were hovering about in the East India Islands, but it is impossible to say in the absence of any definite information from the Admiralty, whether the rumour had any foundation. In the meantime the knowledge that a solitary German cruiser has succeeded in sinking five British vessels in the Bay has naturally aroused some consternation in Calcutta where Marine Insurance rates, according to a telegram have been altogether unsettled.

The Placid Bay.

It is long since the Bay of Bengal, which, except in the rains, has the reputation of being as placid as a pond, heard the roar of a gun, and a trip across the Bay was till the other day as prosaic as a trip by railway train. The last occasion on which guns were heard in the Bay was sixty-two years ago, when in the Burma war, a British Naval Force was sent to Rangoon and Commodore Lambert battered the Forts. To find, however a time when the Bay was unsafe because an enemy's vessels were prowling about we have to go back a century and half to the days when the British and the French were at war and their hostile fleets were scouring the Indian seas.

Germany's Northern Neighbours.

It may be assumed that Germany at the present moment is scouring the whole of Europe for "friends." In this connection Mr. H. G. Wells suggests that it would be prudent for England, France and Russia to give an assurance to Sweden that she has nothing to fear from their success in war. The object of this would be to prevent Sweden from being tempted to throw in her lot with Germany, and dragging Norway with her. Everyone knows that there is a strong pro-German party in Sweden, but the power of the party according to Dr. Dillon, rests less on love of Germany than fear of Russia. It is, of course, absurd to suppose that Russia can now seriously cherish any hostile designs on Scandinavia, but "Truth" seems to think that it would be just as well to let the Swedes know it, and to give them the authority of the Allies for believing it. We learn from another source that Denmark is profiting by the sale of provisions of all kinds to Germany who has adopted "free-trade" on the Danish frontier.

The Tragedy of Belgium.

The misery of Europe's doom through the war is immeasurable. It is beyond imagining. But the plight of Belgium enables us to form some conception of what it is or is to be. The English newspapers of mail week are full of appeals for help; the flood of refugees had already begun to descend upon the shores of England. On August 28, on the motion of the Prime Minister, the House of Commons, as already reported by Reuter, adopted a resolution pledging this country to whole-hearted and unfailing support of the Belgian people. Mr. Asquith's speech was brief and eloquent and full of feeling. So was Mr. Bonar Law's, and so was Mr. Redmond's. Mr. Law said that the debt of the Allies could not be paid in words. The Irish leader regretted that to the motion there had not been attached the offer of a money gift. But there was not; so that Belgium, in the grasp of her ruthless enemy, must content herself with the assurance of support, and a loan of 20 millions. What is to be said of her fate—of the smiling and prosperous land laid waste, her cities ruined, her people suffering the last and bitterest humiliation? They say this war is to end all war. The irony of that prediction for Belgium today!

The Late Mrs. Sagoon.

Mrs. Radhabai Atmaram Sagoon, whose death is announced was a unique personality. It is rare to find a Hindu lady even in this progressive city, in active business, but for thirty years Mrs. Sagoon managed the well-known firm of booksellers started by her late husband more than fifty years ago, developing the concern considerably by her tact, perseverance and enterprise. The deceased lady who was sixty-five years of age was a member of the Goud Saraswat Brahmin community of Bombay. In a public address to the community some years ago Sir Narayan Chandavarker urged upon the rising generation of Goud Saraswats to emulate the example of the late Mr. Atmaram Sagoon. On Tuesday, all the Indian bookselling firms in Bombay were closed in honour of the late Mrs. Sagoon who was highly respected in the trade.

Diabetes—Its Nature and Treatment.

Diabetes is a relentless malady and thousands of men in India are yearly victims to its. It is said to be more prevalent among Hindus than among Mahomedans and more among certain classes of Government officials than among the mass of people. But although much has been done within the last fifteen years to elucidate the mystery of diabetes, no racial or effective cause has yet been found. In "Diabetes—Its Nature and Treatment" (Higginbothams, Madras) the author, the Hon. Dr. T. M. Nair, who as we announced yesterday, is going to Europe with the Madras Hospital ship, advocates a change of venue for further research to India, as none of the European theories seem to fit in exactly with the conditions of the disease as observed in this country. Dr. Nair's book is excellently and popularly written and is of interest even to the lay reader.

The Late Pope.

Among the innumerable stories told of the late Pope's simplicity of character "Truth" has two which are said to be quite new. They are reproduced below:—

The wife and daughter of a friend of mine, a very eminent Modernist, asked for a private audience. They enjoyed a pleasant chat with the good old man, who ordered chairs to be placed for them, instead of keeping them on their knees in front of the throne as strict Papal etiquette demands. At the close of the interview the Pope gave them his blessing, and then rose and opened the door for them, as any other gentleman might have done.

One night, about 1 a.m., the Pope was woken up by the noise of the guard changing in the corridor outside his bedroom. He went to the door and asked the officer of the guard what he was doing there at that time of night. "Guarding your Holiness," was his somewhat disconcerted reply. "Nonsense," replied the Pope, "I don't want guarding. Take your men off and send them to bed, and then perhaps I shall be able to get a little sleep."

TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN MADRAS.

AN ITEM OF PROFIT.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

MADRAS, Sept. 18.

The scheme of public examinations instituted by the Madras Government in technical subjects such as book-keeping, shorthand, typewriting, agriculture, etc., has developed into a very big thing. The number of candidates examined last year was as many as 13,573. The examination department pays more than its own way. It brought the Government last year a profit of nearly Rs. 50,000.

ANGLO-INDIAN REGIMENT.

PROPOSED RECRUITMENT OF EUROPEAN BRITISH SUBJECTS.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

BANGALORE, Sept 18.

The Hon. Mr. Abbott telegraphs to the local branch of the Anglo-Indian Empire League that as result of his question in the Council of Wednesday, depots will be opened throughout India for the recruitment of European British subjects into British regiments. Much satisfaction is shown here, especially as a register had been opened for recruits for a purely Anglo-Indian regiment based on Mr. Abbott's offer of such a body to the Government, immediately on the outbreak of the war.

CEYLON HORSES IN INDIA.

Mr. de Soysa has sent four of his horses to India in charge of Morrison and Trenoweth, says a Ceylon contemporary. They are Metamac, Zaandam, Volsloane and Anemone. Shrewton, the property of the late Mr. Francis Perera, has also been shipped by the same opportunity to be tried over Hurdles. The Ceylon horses will recruit at Lucknow before going to Calcutta.

Metamac and Zaandam will both of them be entered for the Viceroy's Cup, the latter on his running in the Ceylon Turf Club Plate being considered to have a very good chance in the big Indian race.

Official and Personal.

H. E. Lord Willingdon left Bombay for Poona, yesterday morning.

THE BATTLE OF THE AISNE.

GERMANS RETIRE AT SOME POINTS.

EARL KITCHENER ON TURNING OF THE TIDE.

MORE THAN SIX BRITISH DIVISIONS IN THE FIELD.

GERMANS ATTACK THEIR OWN VESSELS.

SEVERAL BADLY MAULED IN THE BALTIC.

The battle of the Aisne which began on Saturday last is still in progress on the whole front.

On the Allies' left although the enemy continues resistance they have retired at some points; while in the centre and on our right the situation is unchanged.

In the House of Lords, on Thursday, Earl Kitchener, outlining the military situation, paid a tribute to Sir John French and other generals and officers and men. His Lordship said that the tide had now turned and the troops were in good heart to advance when the moment arrived. He announced that there were now in the field more than six British divisions and two cavalry divisions.

It is reported from Petrograd that a fairly numerous German flotilla, attended by cruisers, engaged in hunting passenger vessels in the Baltic, mistook their own for enemy ships and engaged them in a lively battle. As a result several cruisers and destroyers entered Kiel badly mauled and many wounded were landed. This gave currency to the rumours of a fight between the German and Russian fleets.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

BIG BATTLE IN PROGRESS.

GERMANS ENTRENCHED WITH HEAVY ARTILLERY.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

A Paris communique summing up the position says:—

The battle is in progress on the whole front between the Oise and the Meuse. The Germans occupy positions prepared for defence and armed with heavy artillery and our progress can only be slow, but the troops are animated by the spirit of attack and are giving proof of vigour and enthusiasm. They have successfully repulsed counter attacks by day and night. Their moral is excellent.

NOT GIVEN WAY AT ANY POINT.

PARIS, Sept. 17, 2-5 a.m.

An official announcement says:—The battle continues. We had not given way at any point at six o'clock on Wednesday evening.

GERMANS RESISTING ON THE LEFT.

SITUATION UNCHANGED IN CENTRE.

LONDON, Sept. 17, 5-55 p.m.

A communique issued in Paris this afternoon says:—On our left the enemy continues resistance although the Germans have retired slightly at certain points. The situation is unchanged in the centre. The Germans are fortifying their positions and are also entrenching themselves at Montfaucon. We have come into touch with the enemy between Etain and Thiaucourt while there is no change on our right wing.

Montfaucon is a village in France in the dep. of Meuse 23 miles S. E. of Montmedy which is 27 miles N. of Verdun.
Etain is 10 miles E. N. E. of Verdun.
Thiancourt, a town of France, 25 miles N. W. of Nancy.

GERMAN RIGHT OVERLAPPED.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

A message from Amiens to the "Daily News" says that the German right was overlapped by the army advancing from Rouen through Amiens.

This caused General Kluck to wheel eastward from Compiegne, and to evacuate Amiens.

Rouen is 27 miles N. W. of Paris.
Amiens is 81 miles N. of Paris by rail.
Compiegne, a town in the French dep. of Oise, on the river Oise, a little below its junction with the Aisne, 32 miles N. N. E. of Paris by rail.

THE BATTLE OF THE AISNE.

OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF THE FIGHTING

LONDON, Sept. 17, 10-5 p.m.

The Press Bureau publishes the following despatch from British headquarters describing the fighting from September 10th to 13th:—

Since Thursday, the 10th, the Allies steadily drove the enemy back over undulating country with patches of thick wood.

The chief tactical feature was six rivers across the direction of the advance. The British met with little resistance and on Friday turned slightly north-east, co-operating with the Allies who had a substantial success along the whole line.

On Saturday the enemy occupied a most formidable position opposite us north of the Aisne, while Soissons was strongly held and entrenchd.

The Third British Corps gained the high ground overlooking the Aisne, east of Soissons, and an artillery duel ensued till mid-night. The enemy had many heavy howitzers in well concealed positions.

The Allies took the southern half of Soissons during the night. This was the beginning of the battle of the Aisne, which was fought in heavy rain.

On Sunday extremely strong resistance was met with along the whole British front of fifteen miles and there was much artillery work, the Germans using heavy howitzers and guarding the crossing over the Aisne with quickfirers.

Portions of all the three British corps crossed the river at nightfall, the engineers erecting three pontoons. The French troops on our left also pressed on and many crossed. During these days many isolated parties of Germans were captured.

Soissons is on the river Aisne, 65 miles N. E. of Paris by rail.

GERMAN POSITION.

GEOGRAPHICALLY AND TECHNICALLY GOOD

LONDON, Sept. 17.

The German position north of the Aisne is geographically and technically good. It is based on an important junction of railway routes providing means of revictualling the retirement.

General Joffre occupies a valuable centre of concentration at Soissons. He has reinforcements of fresh troops.

It appears that the German right is seeking to cover the retreat of the Crown Prince's army in Argonne.

Argonne is a mountainous and forest district of France. It comprehends the tract of country between the rivers Meuse, Marne and Aisne.

THE TIDE TURNED.

EARL KITCHENER'S STATEMENT.

TROOPS IN GOOD HEART.

LONDON, Sept. 17, 6-25 p.m.

In the House of Lords to-day, Earl Kitchener, outlining the military situation, spoke of the consummate skill of Field-Marshal Sir John French, and his calm courage in the conduct of the strategical withdrawal in face of a vastly superior force.

The Government appreciated to the full the value of the services which the Field-Marshal had rendered to his country and the cause of the Allies.

Earl Kitchener also paid a tribute to the marked ability of other generals and the bravery and endurance of officers and men.

The tide had now turned, and the troops were in good heart and ready to advance when the moment arrived. The gallant French armies with which we were so proud to co-operate would receive every support from the British in their national desire to clear their country of invaders.

Earl Kitchener paid a tribute to the Belgian and Russian armies, and said that to-day there was ground for quiet confidence, but we must strenuously develop our army to bring this mighty struggle to a successful issue.

Earl Kitchener announced that there were now in the field more than six British divisions, and two cavalry divisions. These were maintained at full strength by the flow of reinforcements.

INDIA'S EFFICIENT SOLDIERS.

Further regulars and additional cavalry were being organised from the overseas garrisons, including highly-trained and efficient troops from India, of historic fame.

There would also be several divisions locally trained in the light of the experience of the South African war, and in the case of Australia and New Zealand under their new system.

Earl Kitchener emphasised that in recruiting there had been most remarkable demonstrations of energy and patriotism by the young men of the country.

FOUR NEW ARMIES.

He proposed to organise this splendid material into four new armies, whose training would be simplified by the zeal and good. will displayed. Before many months the Territorials would be ready to take their share in the campaign. A division had already gone to Egypt and a brigade to Malta.

Earl Kitchener announced that separation allowances to wives would be increased. He referred to the assistance which would be received in the field from the division of marines and bluejackets being organised by Mr. Churchill.

Earl Kitchener concluded: "In a country priding itself on its outdoor sports, we ought to be able to find sufficient young officers." He was confident that by the spring the British would prove themselves formidable opponents.

We have no definite information as to the numbers constituting the Divisions of which Lord Kitchener speaks. The largest number to a Division would be 30,000 and the lowest about 20,000. The organisation of the Expeditionary Force allowed for six divisions of about 25,000 men each. It may be assumed that the British troops engaged in France number over 150,000 and possibly are nearer 200,000.

A GOLGOTHA OF SLAUGHTER.

HOTTEST FIGHTING IN GERMAN RETREAT.

BRITISH PERSEVERANCE REWARDED.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

Correspondents say that the hottest fighting in the German retreat was at Soissons. The battle lasted four days. It was impossible to enter the town, which was raked by artillery and rifle fire.

The river was swollen by rains, and the enemy, strongly posted on the heights, tried to prevent the British from throwing bridges across. It was a Golgotha of slaughter.

The British batteries crossed and re-crossed the river and eventually mastered the German guns and enabled the pontoons to be completed. Two German batteries had been captured when the enemy fled.

BRITISH PLUCK.

SCOTSMEN'S ALLEGIANCE TO THEIR RAZOR AND TEAPOT.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

Describing the British pluck and coolness, a Frenchman attached to a Scottish regiment says that no danger deters them from allegiance to their razor and teapot.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 17.

British, French, Russian and German authorities have agreed to exchange the lists of prisoners of war.

GENERAL JOFFRE'S REINFORCEMENTS

LONDON, Sept. 17, 5-55 p.m.

Paris correspondents declare that General Joffre has reinforcements which will make impossible a German revenge.

GERMAN BLUNDER IN THE BALTIC.

ATTACK THEIR OWN SHIPS BY MISTAKE.

SEVERAL CRUISERS AND DESTROYERS BADLY MAULED.

LONDON, Sept. 18, 5-20 a.m.

A message to "The Times" from Petrograd states that the rumours of a fight between the German and Russian fleets in the Baltic are untrue.

What happened was that a fairly numerous German flotilla, attended by cruisers, engaged in hunting passenger vessels mistook their own for enemy ships and engaged them in a lively battle.

The number of the vessels is not known but several cruisers and destroyers entered Kiel badly mauled and many wounded were landed.

SINKING OF THE HELA.

SUBMARINE NEVER SEEN BY GERMAN SHIPS.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

Seamen at Harwich, describing the torpedoing of the Hela, state that the submarine came to the surface at half-past-six on Sunday morning, and sighted the enemy within range.

The submarine dived and discharged two torpedoes at an interval of fifteen seconds. She rose after an hour, and saw the Hela, badly damaged and listing heavily. There were other German ships in the vicinity.

The submarine dived again, and when she rose the Hela had disappeared. The submarine was never shot at, and was apparently never seen.

"OUR COUNTRY FIRST."

THE MOTTO OF LIBERALS, TORIES AND NATIONALISTS.

DOMESTIC QUESTIONS LAID ASIDE.

LONDON, Sept 16, 9-30 p.m.

Mr. F. E. Smith, interviewed, emphasised that although Unionists might justly resent the putting of Home Rule on the Statute Book, their firm and single determination was to support the Government and defeat the common enemy. The Government represented a united Empire. When the sword was sheathed there was time enough to resume home affairs.

Party politics were a very small consideration. Until we were victorious, all domestic questions were laid aside.

"The Unionist party will lend every assistance to the Government, which has determined to see the country through the present crisis, and is resolved to carry the great struggle to a successful and triumphant conclusion."

The motto of Mr. Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson alike is "Our country first," and that has always been our motto.

Mr. Smith concluded: "I am addressing a meeting with Mr. Churchill on Monday at Liverpool. I am prepared to stand side by side till the war is over with any Englishman, Scotchman, Irishman and Welshman, who means to see the war through. I know this is the view of the whole Unionist party."

GERMAN OUTRAGES.

BELGIAN COMMISSION TO PRESIDENT WILSON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.

President Wilson cordially received the Belgian Commission to protest against the German outrages. President Wilson expressed on behalf of the American people friendship and admiration for the Belgians, and respect for their King. He promised to give the document thoughtful consideration.

He said he prayed God that the war would be over very soon. Then the day of reckoning would come, when the nations of Europe would assemble and determine a settlement. Where wrongs have been committed, their consequences and the relative responsibility involved would be assessed. What such a tribunal could not compass was the opinion which mankind, the final arbiter in such matters, would supply.

Meanwhile it would be inconsistent for a neutral nation to express a final judgment.

President Wilson has replied to the protest made by the Emperor William against the use of dum-dum bullets promising consideration. He will reply to President Poincare on the same lines.

INDIAN OFFICERS PAY.

MARQUIS OF CREWE'S SYMPATHY.

LONDON, Sept. 17.

Referring to the question of the pay of officers of the Indian expeditionary force, the Marquis of Crewe said:—The matter is simple enough as regards the officers of the Indian army, but is not so simple in the case of officers of British regiments brought home. He added, however, that he was disposed to regard the claim with a great deal of sympathy. He was unable to make definite promises, but the matter was being carefully considered.

VESSELS SUNK BY EMDEN.

GIFTS TO OFFICERS AND CREWS.

TREMENDOUS LOSS OF TEA.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

CALCUTTA, Sept. 17

It is understood that the grant of twenty-five thousand rupees has been made out of the Bengal branch of the Imperial Indian War Fund for distribution among the officers and crews of the vessels sunk by the Emden. The gift will be highly appreciated in view of the fact that those on board the vessels have lost most of their personal belongings and are now out of employment at a time when it is exceedingly difficult to obtain fresh appointments at sea owing to the general stoppage of marine sailings.

The sinking of the Diplomat with four millions pounds of tea brings the total quantity of tea lost since the beginning of the war up to about eight and a half millions, assuming that the Tanu's cargo was a complete loss.

AUSTRIANS COMPLETELY ROUTED.

Undetailed estimates of Austrian losses since the taking of Lemburg are:—killed and wounded 250,000, prisoners 100,000 and guns 400."

A similar message despatched at 12-30 this morning runs as following from the Press Bureau:—

Nyasaland.—"Reconnaissance made on the 13th across the frontier, no enemy found."

LEGAL STATUS OF POSSESSOR OF A GERMAN NAME QUESTIONED.

When the damages suit of Mr. A. Meyer, late Honorary Treasurer of the Bowring Institute, against the committee of this institution, for wrongful removal from such office early this year, came on before the District Judge, Mr. B. Lawrence, the counsel for defendants, took a preliminary objection that Meyer being a German name the plaintiff had no right of audience in a British Court. Mr. Saldanha for the plaintiff replied that in such a case Sir William Meyer, Finance Member to the Government of India would be a German. The Court postponed consideration of the point till the 3rd October, one defendant being still unserved.

EFFECTS OF WAR IN MADURA.

LABOUR DISTRESS IN DYEING AND WEAVING INDUSTRIES.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

MADRAS, Sept. 18.

The war having affected the imports of dyestuffs, gold thread and fine-yarns, there is impending a period of labour distress in the dyeing and weaving industries of Madura. In order to concert measures to relieve such distress, a public meeting of the Sourasthras was held. A resolution was passed authorising the Chairman to send a telegraphic message to the Governor of Madras, conveying expressions of profound loyalty and sincere devotion of the Sourasthra Community to the British Throne and the King-Emperor, and prayers for the success of British arms. A Labour Distress Relief Committee was formed to deal with the labour question. This committee will enquire into the question to find out the extent of distress or the time when it may begin and take steps to relieve it by raising subscriptions from the Sourasthra Community, by advising labourers to take to other work and by such other ways which suggest themselves to the Committee from time to time.

HOW THE BRITISH FOUGHT.

ACCOUNTS BY THE WOUNDED.

WHAT EACH REGIMENT DID.

The "Daily Mail" special correspondent Mr. H. Hamilton Fyfe writes from Rouen under the date August 26:—

I have just seen the first trainload of British wounded arrive from the front.

Probably you think it was a terrible sight—men with their heads bandaged and red stains showing through the white; men with arms in splints, their sleeves hanging empty; men limping, men carried away on stretchers, men with feeble arms round comrades' shoulders only just able to stand upright.

Well, there was all that—and more that I will not describe. But the impression which the scene left was not a harrowing impression. I felt not cast down but braced up. The wounded were not miserable themselves. Why should I be? They were perfectly splendid in their cheery stoicism, in their uncomplaining acceptance of all that they had gone through—and mean to go through again as soon as the docter will let them.

I had brought from Paris a bundle of the day's "Continental Daily Mail" to give them. I turned out all the cigarettes I had and wished I had hundreds more. I felt so proud to be their countryman; my heart swelled so full with grateful affection as I looked into their grimy, bristly faces and listened to their plain, matter-of-fact stories told without any touch of self-consciousness or dramatic effect, that I would have liked to distribute all I possess among them, and still I should have felt their debtor.

Depressed? Good Heavens, no. War has its terrible side truly, but what they showed ... were the nobility of spirit, the calm courage which it brings out. They made me think better of the whole human race.

GENERAL JOFFRE'S PRAISE.

They had all come from the fighting in the neighbourhood of Mons. Here one of General French's army corps was actively engaged; and when this retired, after holding the enemy back (which was the task assigned to and stubbornly carried out by the British force on Sunday and Monday last), another army corps moved up into position.

The men composing the divisions which bore the brunt of the attack had to take the field immediately they arrived. In point of fact they only arrived just in time to stem the German onrush. For days they had been travelling and marching. They needed repose. In spite of this they behaved like fresh troops and held their ground magnificently, winning warm praise from General Joffre.

The wounded came through in an R.A.M.C train with Red Crosses all over it, and well fitted. They were much better off than a number of French wounded who arrived in an ordinary train about the same time. It was a wretched afternoon—raining steadily. The stretcherparties of R.A.M.C. men tramping to the station were watched only by apathetic groups of damp spectators. Yet, what would not some of those poor fevered Frenchmen have given to be out in the rain, opening their mouths to catch it or lapping it up from pools?

On the track were some ambulance assistants with big jugs and boxes full of little tin cups. Instantly from every carriage window hands were stretched out and eyes made pitiful appeal. It was impossible to serve them quickly enough. I lent a hand and shall never forget the looks of gratitude and relief they gave me.

Our men were nothing like so thirsty as that. They had been attended to all the way along. And on the whole they seemed to me to have suffered far less than the French. A good many had merely broken down from hard marching. They will be all right again in a few days. Of very bad wounds there were not many. Most of the men on stretchers had bright eyes and could talk with picturesque profanity about their bad luck. One demanded a cigarette as soon as he was taken out of the straw in the van and was carried off puffing at it contentedly.

Another produced from his pocket a piece of shell—the piece, he declared, which hit him—and exhibited it to a group of comrades bending over him.

I asked one man with his head entirely bound up and only the round of his face showing if he felt much pain. "Gives me a bit of a headache now and then," he said, "and I don't seem to be able to use this right arm. But what does it matter so long as I can wear the latest fashion, eh? How do you think the whole regiment would look if they were got up like me?"

This man belonged to a regiment which was ordered out of Mons on Sunday morning and came under fire at once. They had no trenches, no cover of any kind. They had to drop down and lie where they were all day. When it got dark they did their best to make trenches. "But I can tell you," he said, "while we were out there, with the shells coming as regular as a postal delivery, there weren't any heads popping up!"

The Berkshires were luckier. They were entrenched, and although the German gunners bombarded them for close on twenty-four hours their casualties were very few indeed.

"We marched into Mons on Sunday about ten," one of them said, "and were just going to be billeted, when the order came for us to fall in again and get a move on. We wanted a rest. We'd been marching since four. We hadn't had our boots off since we left home. (I haven't had mine off yet.) It had been blazing hot and the ninety-six-pound loads on our backs made us wish curselves back in cloudy old England.

"Still, we were wanted. We knew that or they wouldn't have sent for us. So we humped off again.

"We were to advance under cover of artillery fire, but in the meantime the enemy were doing a bit of artillery practice too, so we threw up trenches and snuggled down in them to wait for whatever might happen. It didn't keep us waiting long. The German gunners were over a ridge two or three miles in front, and their shells soon came whistling around us. There we lay and watched them coming. I got what they call my baptism of fire, and at first I didn't like it! Fortunately most of them burst behind us and did no harm, though some of them burst backwards, as you might say, and did get in among us. We thought they might stop a bit when it got dark, but not they. They kept it up as hard as ever.

AIRMAN SHOT DOWN.

"In the daytime they had aeroplanes to tell them where to drop their shells. They were flying about all the time. One came a bit too near. Our gunners, a long way behind us, you know, waited and let him come on. He thought he was all right. Two thousand feet he was up, I dare say. We could hear his engine.

"He may have made a lot of notes, but they weren't any use to him or anybody, for all of a sudden our gunners let fly at him. We could see the thing stagger, and then it dropped like a stone, all crumpled up. Good bye, Mr. Flying Man. That was the end of him.

"In the dark they turned on searchlights. We could see them hunting about for someone to pot at. Uncanny, that was. To see the blooming big lane of light working round and round until it came to something! The we heard the shells whistle. And when it came round to us and hit us up so that we could see each other's faces, Lord, it made my blood run cold—just like I used to feel when I was a nipper and woke up and saw a light and thought it was a ghost and lay there wondering what would happen next.

HUNDREDS V. THOUSANDS.

"Some of our division got near enough to pot at the enemy, but we never did. All we had to do was to lie there while the gunners kept on fighting their duel over our heads. Our aim was good. One German battery gave up business. But we don't know the country same as the Germans. They know Belgium better than the Belgians do. And there were thousands of them to our hundreds.

"Of course we had to retire. Off we went back, quietly, you know, not in any hurry to where we came from. Once we stopped to let some of the others get away. Fought a rearguard action. Held the enemy back all right and then skedaddled ourselves. They said we'd done what they wanted us to do, but I don't know. What I do know is that if some of our regiments suffered badly, the Germans suffered a lot worse."

The Middlesex Regiment was among the unlucky ones. "It was like this," a corporal with a hole in his hand told me "The Middlesex had to drop their packs and the Germans picked 'em up. They put on the British overcoats, and, not content with that, which made it difficult to tell friend from foe, they took a lot of women and children out of a village and made 'em go in front waving their handkerchiefs.'

"Ah, and another thing they done," put in another man. "They cut the hands off of our Red Cross men—yes, cut their hands off, the swine!

Both these stories are to be received doubtfully, though there is no doubt that the men thoroughly believed them. I heard from others of Germans being caught wearing British officers' uniforms. One such spy was actually brought down in custody in the Red Cross train. But there is an inevitable tendency to exaggerate such incidents. They get curiously confused ideas into their heads, some of the men. One told me that what was happening was this: "This Russians are in Berlin and are driving the German on to us, so that we can crumple 'em up."

Many of the men scarcely saw a German. "Didn't give us any chance," they said resentfully. One man came upon one in a skirmish through a village. "Began talking," he said. "Yah, yah, yah, or something like that. What did I do? Ran my bayonet through him. And would again!" It sounds horrible to you, I suppose, but he took it quite as a matter of course.

LANCASHIRES' BAYONETS.

An intelligent Northumberland Fusilier told me his regiment had had street fighting in a colliery town not far from Mons. "Mostly firing, but there was one bayonet charge. The South Lancashires made it. The Germans don't like that sort of fighting. They won't come out, or they wouldn't come, at any rate, to meet us. Once we got within seeing distance of a whole bunch of them. They were in close formation, masses of 'em. Our machine guns did 'em up proper. When we do catch them they don't ask for two helpings.

SCOTS GREYS' FEAT.

"The Scots Greys ran into a patrol of their cavalry. Seventeen. They finished off the lot. The German's artillery practice is good. At least we found it so. They kept on enfilading our trenches, and they didn't take long to get fresh ranges. But their rifle fire is rotten."

Opinions differed about the German gunners' accuracy. This is explained by the obvious fact that some batteries have their fire better directed than others. "One thing they couldn't do," another man of the Berkshires told me. "They couldn't hit the gasworks at Mons. If they had I wouldn't be here. We were close to the works and we could see they were trying and trying to land a shell on the big gasometer. Every time they missed we cheered. But I tell you we waited for the next shot pretty anxiously. This side and that side they went, too short or too far. They couldn't get it fair, and just as well for us they didn't or we'd have been all blown up.

A 20th Hussars spoke with some bitterness of an infantry regiment whose retreat the Hussars were covering. "Instead of going round us they came right at us and drew the fire on to us. That's how I got hit. Nothing much; soon be well."

This man spoke of our artillery with enthusiasm. The big siege guns of the R.G.A., which I saw trundling through the streets of Rouen a week ago, played dire havoc, it seems. And he told me of a magnificent example of the courage of the Field gunners. A half battery in rather an exposed position was galling the Germans by the accuracy of its aim. Several of their batteries made a combined attack on it. It was a fight between a David and half a dozen Goliaths.

THE LAST GUNNER.

One by one its guns were silenced. The men who had been serving them lay dead around. At last only one man was left. He went on doing his best, working steadily and to all appearance calmly. He would have gone on till he dropped, for although the Germans ceased fire for a few moments, they would have begun again and finished him off, in spite of their admiration for his pluck. But an officer called him away. "And you can bet," the Hussar said, "that he was mighty sorry to go."

Of the story which reached Paris last night about a number of men being surprised bathing I could obtain no direct confirmation. One man had heard of it. "Shot down like rabbits they were," he said. But it was only hearsay. What I wanted were things seen and experienced. The man who showed me the burnt hole in his coat where a piece of shell went through understood this well. He was not going to tell me anything he could not prove!

From the station yard the wounded men were taken away in motor-vans, in wagons in streetcars. A number went into the hospital which the R. A. M. C. have established here. A number were embarked at once in the Great Western steamers Saint Andrew and Saint Patrick (which usually ply between Fishguard and Rosslare). The pathetic procession of men hobbling or being carried up the gangway drew the sympathy of the large crowd which (still in the rain) watched the embarkation.

There was cheering as each vehicle drew up and as the stretchers were unloaded. Each man had a label attached to him describing his hurts. The medical officers looked at it, gave orders, and passed him quickly on. One of the vessels leaves for Southampton to-night.

I was struck, and a friend with me was struck too, by the fine faces of the men we talked to. They all had a look in their eyes which seemed to lift them above the common level of humanity, a look of depth and sincerity; what we call a far-away expression. I wondered what this meant. I know now. It is the look of men who have gazed into the face of Death without shrinking, who faced the great ordeal and came through it unafraid.

SHRAPNEL HAVOC IN THE TRENCHES.

The "Daily Mail" special correspondent, Mr. Duncan McDiarmid at Hmiens, wired on Aug. 27:—

The morning boat train from Paris was delayed for about an hour and a half here this morning. Outside the station was a train of British and another train of French wounded while farther down the line we passed a long train filled with wounded French Senegalese troops.

The train in which the British wounded were travelling was an ordinary French troops train made up of the usual trucks, in which through the open doors, I caught glimpses of men lying on the straw with greatcoats thrown over them.

At the door of every truck were knots of sunburnt privates with heads, hands, and legs bandaged, all cheerful and smiling, despite the rather woebegone appearance their white linen bandages lent them.

Some had apparently lost their uniform or had had it cut away from them in the dressing of their wounds, for they were wearing French greatcoats as dressing-gowns.

As I passed along the line of trucks the men promptly guessed my identity and greeted me cheerily with cries of "We'll get William yet."

A Scottish private who had been wounded in the head, left arm, and right leg, his arm being literally ripped up by a shrapnel bullet, gave me a dramatic account of the fighting yesterday afternoon.

"It was somewhere round Mons," he said, "but I don't rightly know where. By Jove, it was a mighty hard tussle, I can tell you, and in the end our little lot had to retreat. There were no French or Belgian troops where we were.

"The Germans advanced in great masses four or five deep and as fast as we shot them down another mass came on, simply going over the bodies. There was no stoping them at all.

"The German artillery made remarkably precise shooting. Their Zeppelins and aeroplanes came over us all the time, giving their gunners the range so that the shells were bursting within two or three feet of where we were in the trenches. Nearly all our wounded were struck by shrapnel.

"We had twenty-two hours in the trenches and were most uncommonly hungry, I can tell you. Then they brought us up some provision wagons, but hardly had they come up to the line when two or three German shells came over and broke them all up."

A Scottish private said to me: "Yesterday afternoon I was crawling through a mangel-wurzel field with the bullets pinging all round me. I thought my last day had come. Then I got hit in the foot and they fetched me in."

WOMEN AS SHIELDS.

Some of the British soldiers standing on the line told me of the stories told by the British wounded who came in to Amiens from the front last night. One of the wounded had told how the Germans had advanced on the British, who were entrenched in front of a village, driving a group of shrieking women in front of them at the point of the bayonet.

Another man had said that a good deal of confusion was created when night fell by the similarity between the German and the British field uniform; also some German soldiers were actually wearing the British khaki tunics, which they must have stripped off the dead.

SCOTS FUSILIERS' LOSSES.

The French wounded with whom I spoke were also in splendid form. They came from Mulhouse and had been twice in the town, which the French captured twice over. Some of them told me they had gone into action after a night march of thirty miles and openly rejoiced that they had had a chance of fighting the Germans. All they wanted, they said, was to get back to the front. Many had German helmets and caps as trophies.

There was a very pleasing demonstration of the Entente Cordiale on the open railway track bathed by the morning sun. The Frenchwomen in the train, with charming spontaneity, produced paper and pencils, and giving them to the British soldiers asked them to write down the names and addresses of their families that they might send news of the men home.

The soldiers replied with alacrity, and all along the train the men might be seen busily writing up against the sides of the trucks. An American woman gave a British soldier an American flag, which he promptly nailed to the roof of his truck.

The train moved on to an unknown destination with the Stars and Stripes fluttering bravely in the wind to cries of "Vive l'Angleterre! Vive l'Entente!"

LONDON LETTER.

BRITISH PUBLIC AND THE WAR.

A WONDERFUL CALM.

THE FALL OF NAMUR.

THE VEIL OF SECRECY.

LORD KITCHENER AND THE CORRESPONDENTS.

The news of the fall of Namur was, the first shock in the way of adverse news which the British public had to bear. Our London correspondent describes the wonderful coolness and calm with which the British public views the war, discusses the veil of secrecy imposed by the War Office, the raising of Lord Kitchener's new Army, and the two White Papers revealing Germany's part in bringing about the war.

(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON Aug. 28.

It was not, I think, until Monday of this week (August 24) that the reality of the war began to come home to the English people. What made the difference was the announcement of the fall of Namur. There were no details and no explanation. The readers of every paper had been told that the defences of Namur were at least as strong as those of Liege. They could hold out for three weeks, three months. The German plan of compaign disarranged by the resistence of Liege, would be completely overthrown by the defence of Namur. The allied army, having taken the offensive, was magnificently in position on the Sambre and Meuse. The strategy of its commanders had been extraordinarily successful. The invading host was exactly where it ought to be, from the Allies' point of view. The great turning movement had been frustrated. The roads to France were all held. It was impossible for the line to be broken. The first great trial of strength would and must end favourably for the Allies. And meanwhile the Russians were inexorably advancing upon Berlin. All was, indeed, going well.

THE MEANING OF NAMUR.

The fall of Namur was officially announced on Monday afternoon by the Press Bureau. The news had an instantaneous effect upon public feeling. The optimists suffered a severe shock. The mystery was impenetrable. Explanations, all merely conjectural, were numerous enough. One of them, which found many adherents, was that the Belgian garrison —confronted by the ruin of Belgium, through its single-handed resistance to the invader and in despair because of the absence of the English—had lost heart and given up the struggle. Later messages, it is true, spoke of some of the forts being intact; and so they may have been. But Namur had fallen, and the news had done its work in England, partly at all events. Even yet we have had no official account, but despatches from correspondents appearing in this morning's papers (they may, like so many others, be fanciful or exaggerated) add a chapter of horror. It is said that a two days' pitiless bombardment prepared the way for the assault and destruction of the city. Namur commanded the position taken up by the Franco-British force. Its fall preluded the first great battle at Mons and Charleroi, which was followed by the retreat of the Allies to the frontier.

MONS AND CHARLEROI.

As I write the first imperfect, accounts from combatants are coming in, for yesterday the first batch of English wounded, were landed on the coast. From these, of course, we get only fragments; little bits of description, personal impressions, childlike expressions of amazement at the staggering actualities of war as it is now fought. Officially we know next to nothing of the great battle, even of the terrific encounter at Mons which gave the British force its initial experience of meeting the German foe. The Press Bureau has so far acted upon the principle that its business is to confine itself to bare announcements. Concerning the three days contest,—it may be the first round of the greatest battle in history,—Mr. F. E. Smith and his colleagues gave out altogether just about 80 words—a verbal frugality, as the paper puts it, which may be reckoned as exceedingly unwise. All we know for certain is that the British force, meeting the enemy at Mons, faced a terrific onslaught from a greatly superior force, stood up to it unshaken, wrought deadly havoc with its guns, and finally was compelled to retire, with the French Army, upon the frontier line where it would have met the invaders if the counter-offensive had not been taken last week. The battle raged for three days, ending on Monday. Sir John French announced that the British casualties numbered something over 2,000, the German losses, it was implied, being very much greater. About two days ago the fighting was renewed, and there was a further retirement into France. There must, accordingly, be a greatly increased tale of losses. But we do not know what it is.

THE HORROR OF SECRECY.

The deadly silence is the chief ground of complaint against the Government Press Bureau, which during the week has been attacked with no little vigour in the papers. The great war is being fought behind an iron curtain. Silence is, apparently, to be the primary condition. The armies that are to decide the fate of Europe are to have no eyes upon them. Their movements are unguessed at, and are not to be reported. They are to be handled as colossal machines, not as battalions made up of human units. So far the English people have accepted the fact. They have been acquiescent, patient, and in the main uncomplaining. The Press with remarkable unanimity, has consented to its own practical extinction. It has not made any public protest against the abolition of the war correspondent. It was at the command of the British War Office, not of the French or Belgian, that English correspondents were cleared out of Belgium and prevented from joining the French field force. It is understood that during the opening days of the war Lord Kitchener consented to allow each of the principal English newspapers to nominate a representative. These were to be kept strictly under supervision, in charge of an army officer. But even so, the permits were withheld; and I am given to understand that the newspapers are now confronted with an amended offer on the part of the War Office. If I am rightly informed, it is an offer which reduced the privileges of the Press in respect of representation to the very narrowest limit. But presumably it will be accepted, if Lord Kitchener insists. Newspaper proprietors and editors have been brought completely into line. At a later stage, no doubt, they will make a concerted effort to recover a part of their freedom; but, so long as the campaign is in the critical stage, they will conform without serious protest to whatever regulation or restriction that is placed upon them. The French War Office is less rigid than our own Press Bureau. It is sending out fuller and less colourless bulletins. It is freely circulating news which our Censor keeps back. And it is recognising (an important point) that the public cannot be fed upon bald and jejune phrases, but must be encouraged by at least a small amount of human feeling.

THE ENGLISH SELF-CONTROL.

On many sides it has been asserted during the week that the policy of secrecy will have an inevitably bad effect upon the public feeling in regard to the war and the necessity for its vigorous prosecution. From the stream of letters contributed to "The Times" by eminent hands, and from many other signs, you may infer the existence of a certain misgiving as to the continued support of the war in the country. It is complained that the public has not yet been aroused. It is suspected that there is no general understanding of the causes of the war, the justice of the Allies' cause, and the necessity for England's being in it. The doubt is expressed whether when industry is still further disorganised and the pinch of hunger begins to be severely felt, the working classes will be prepared to continue supporting the Government. Hence, it is urged, there is urgent need for a great educative compaign. The country must be made to realise that this is a struggle of life and death; that we cannot draw back; that victory on land as well as on sea is vital; that Britain must be prepared for the uttermost sacrifices in money and men. But what form shall the propaganda take? The newspapers speak, and have spoken from the beginning, with one voice—"We must see this thing through." The people, you would say, agree without reservation. Yet it remains true that up to the present the war has not brought any emotional disturbance. The methods of destruction adopted and vowed by the Germans have, unquestionably, stirred the country to the deepest indignation. But every observer, I am convinced, would agree that the coolness of the nation is extraordinary. Externally it looks like indifference, complacency, a consciousness of complete security. It is really I believe the characteristic impassiveness of the British people; the absence of imagination which enables them to remain unmoved by the most transcendent and appalling events until some overwhelming actuality crashes into the field of consciousness. That will come, we must believe, in a very few days or hours—long before these lines are printed in India. The stream of wounded will begin it; the first-hand stories of the mighty conflict will make it hideous and real. And there may be no need for the adoption of a plan which finds many advocates in these days,—the opening by Mr. Lloyd George and by some other eloquent members of the Government of a platform crusade with "The Empire in Danger" as its watchword.

CAN WE GET THE NEW ARMY?

This is the question that blots out all others, except the question of the present hour, which is, of course: Can the Allies' line of defence stand against the shock of German onslaught? Lord Kitchener on going into office, asked for an additional half-million men, 100,000 of them at once. The 100,000 have been recruited, not without immense efforts. The remainder are needed at once. What is to happen? On Tuesday,—the day upon which we received the news of the Allies' defeat,—Lord Kitchener made his first speech as War Minister. His statement, as your readers will have learned, was of deep gravity. He paid a fine tribute to the conduct of the British troops at Mons, as also to the heroism of the Belgian resistance. He stated the most encouraging view of the present situation,—that Germany had already called up all her available forces, while the vast reserves of the British Empire were as yet untapped Powerful contingents were coming from India and the self-governing dominions. A great part of the Territorial Force was already prepared for service in the foreign field. The Field Army now coming into being might rise in the next six or seven months to a total of thirty divisions. "But if the war should be protracted and if its fortunes should be varied or adverse, exertions and sacrifices beyond any which have been demanded will be required from the whole nation and Empire." That means universal military service,—one month or six months ahead. Yet on the following day the Prime Minister, asked whether the Government were considering such a scheme denied it. "The reply was in the negative,"—the hard-worn discredited ministerial phrase. The decision, we may assume, depends upon the swiftness or slowness of the campaign. At any moment the fortunes of war may place us under a complete military despotism, with immediate compulsory service as its corollary. No protests or object could in those circumstances avail. It may be doubted whether any would be attempted, except by a feeble minority. The Liberal Press in general would support the Government. If the Labour Press became troublesome it would be suppressed. The country would accept conscription as a dread necessity, and in the hope that the yoke of compulsion could be thrown off with the declaration of peace. But the object of the militarists would be attained and British democracy would have yielded up its freedom. And this, we may be assured, is what is going to happen. At the moment there is little or no discussion of the problem in the Press. Day by day the Tory papers clamour for conscription. The Liberal papers keep silence, fearing to raise a debate lest at any moment the Government may be faced by a necessity which will leave no room for opposition or protest. Liberalism as a creed or a force is dead or suspended: it has no life in war-time. And yet is it not true that war provides Liberalism with a compelling opportunity? We face the world with an irresistible, a triumphant example of the voluntary principles,—the British Navy. Could this superb instrument of defence have been built up on a compulsory system? Could it be so maintained? And, similarly, is it conceivable that with a Conscript army, at present nonexistent, we could maintain the struggle against Germany?

ANOTHER WHITE PAPER.

It is probable that the full story of the diplomatic manoeuvres which led up to the war will not be told for a generation. But we are getting a few of the gaps filled up. Since the appearance of the English White Paper we have had some of the German dispatches,—the telegrams which passed between the Tsar and the Kaiser at the end of July, and brief summaries of the German White Book. Far more interesting and illuminating, however, is a little White Paper issued yesterday containing an account by Sir Edward Goschen of his last conversation with the Kaiser's Ministers in Berlin. It will have a place in every history of the tremendous period through which we are living. It tells first, of the final appeal of England against the violation of Belgium, with the German Secretary of State's explanation of its necessity to the German plan in order to effect a swift blow upon France. And it goes on to give a description of the British Ambassador's last talk with the Imperial Chancellor and the Chancellor's remarkable display of passion. "What we had done was unthinkable; it was like striking a man from behind while he was fighting for his life against two assailants. He held Great Britain responsible for all the terrible events that might happen." I need not quote further from Sir Edward Goschen's dispatch: it will of course be reproduced in your news columns. Every one reading it will ask: what does it reveal of the German position and state of mind? The German Government knew they must have known, to what extent England was committed by the Entente. The German public, like the English public, did not know,—hence the madness of Berlin on the evening of the declaration of war. What then is the explanation of the Chancellor's words and behaviour? Behind it there appears to have been a moral misjudgment. Germany believed that British neutrality could be bought. Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg seems to have acted to the last upon this assumption. If he did not, his agitation and anger were put for the occasion,—which is not a likely supposition. The Chancellor knew of our obligation to France, and to Belgium; and what he thought we may infer from his contemptuous reference to the "scrap of paper." And now that the worst calamity has befallen, it is equally important for us to keep in mind the terrible fact that the German people, so far as our knowledge goes are persuaded of the treachery of England. Every German newspaper, every private utterance, proves it; and during the last few days we have had evidence of the complete agreement of the best academic opinion. We are accustomed to hear that the German Universities have been for half a century preaching the doctrine of force, and that hundreds of professors of history and sociology and physical science have been co-operating to mould the national mind and temper in conformity with Potsdam. All this we know; but educated England had not realised that the best and broadest intellects of Germany take the same stand. We know it now,—for Professors Hackel and Eucken, the twin stars of Jena University have issued a joint manifesto against England for what they call her choice of the wrong side,—her treason to the cause of civilisation and culture.

INDIANS IN THE COLONIES.

INDIAN VIEW OF THE VICEROY'S SPEECH.

The "Indian Social Reformer" discussing the Viceroy's recent speech in the Council on the problem relating to the emigration of Indians to the self-governing British Colonies, says:—His Excellency expressed his satisfaction at the removal of the principal grievances from which the Indians in South Africa have been suffering, and paid a well-deserved tribute to the Botha Government for the bold and generous statesmanship which inspired them in getting the recent legislative measure passed in the South African Union Parliament. The country would have been highly gratified if his Excellency had seen his way to add a word of appreciation of the high-minded and self-restrained attitude of the Indian leaders, which was an equally essential factor in bringing about the present settlement.

VIOLATION OF THE IMPERIAL PRINCIPLE.

His Excellency next criticised the doctrine that the full rights of citizenship of the British Empire include the right to settle in any part of that Empire irrespective of the existence of local legislation barring or limiting access to the Dominion to which access is sought. If we may venture to say so, the dictrine would be more correctly stated if we said that the full rights of British citizenship include the right to settle in any part of that Empire, and local legislation detrimental to this right is a violation of the principle of a United Empire except as regards criminals, lunatics, disreputables, and persons suffering from contagious diseases. His Excellency said that the doctrine which he criticised was the one for which the Government of India had long and consistently contended, but he thought that the course of events had made it more and more clear that there is no hope of its adoption. We regret if this should be so, as, in our humble opinion, such a state of things is against all our ideas of imperial citizenship. And not only ours, but also evidently of the Prime Minister's. In his memorable Guildhall speech on the 4th instant, Mr. Asquith referring to India's co-operation in this war, said: "We welcome with appreciation and affection their proferred aid and, in an Empire which knows no distinction of race or class, where all alike are subjects of the King-Emperor and are joint and equal custodians of our common interest and fortunes, we here hail with profound and heartfelt gratitude their association side by side and shoulder to shoulder with Home and Dominion troops, under a flag which is a symbol to all of unity that the world in arms cannot dissever or dissolve." We cannot believe this was rhetoric.

There is no statesman living whose words will evoke more implicit acceptance among Indian publicists, but we are constrained to say that his Excellency's generous endeavour to remove what he called the misapprehensions regarding the attitude of Colonial statesmen to India and her people, is not altogether convincing. No one says that the latter are actuated by feelings of "animosity" towards Indians. Animosity is a sentiment which people feel to those whom they regard as their equals. The average Colonial looks on the Indian as being unspeakably his inferior, because the latter happens to be "coloured," and his feeling towards him is one of contempt. We know that European emigrants are rejected from the Colonies as well as Indian, but can it be maintained that the tests are the same in both cases?

NOT CONVINCING.

By the way, Mr. Roche's figures, which his Excellency cited, as to the numbers of English and Indian emigrants rejected by Canada, are misleading. During the last ten years 917 English persons are said to have been rejected at Canadian ports as compared with 376 Indians. What is the total numbers of the two races which sought admission? We have not the figures, but we fancy the English rejected will work out to a small fraction of the total as compared with the Indian.

We do not wish to follow his Excellency in his criticism of the organisers of the Komagata Maru's trip to Canada. The law laying down the "continuous voyage" clause, is an obvious subterfuge, and it has seemed to us that the promoters of the Komagata Maru trip, had done a service by showing up unmistakably that it is so. No doubt, the adventure entailed sufferings to those who engaged in it, as the Passive Resistance movement in South Africa did on those who followed Mr. Gandhi's lead. But if we may adopt his Excellency's words used in another connection in an earlier part of his speech, there is a worse thing than physical hardships, and that is national dishonour. We do not think that any solution which does not recognise that the question to the Indian people is essentially one of national honour, is likely to prove acceptable.

RECIPROCITY MUST BE COMPLETE.

The alternative solution which his Excellency has put forward for the consideration of the Indian public is based on the analogy of the arrangement between Japan and Canada. We know that a certain number of Japanese, 400 we believe, are admitted every year on payment of 50 dollars a head, into Canada, but we are not at present in possession of the details of the agreement. His Excellency spoke of the agreements with the Colonies being on "a basis of complete reciprocity." If the reciprocity is really complete, that is to say, if the Colonials enjoy no more and certainly no less rights in India than Indians in the Colonies, the acceptance of such a scheme as that outlined by his Excellency may not be regarded as clashing with the national honour. It is on this point, that the country would like to have more information. For instance, would the Canadian or Australian be entitled to compete for the Indian Civil Service, without the Indian enjoying a corresponding right in the Colonial Services? The best thing would perhaps be for the Government of India to issue a full statement of the scheme and to invite the opinion of the public thereon.

PLAGUE IN THE PRESIDENCY.

The following is a statement of plague deaths reported to have occurred in Districts and Native States in the Bombay Presidency for the week ending 12th September 1914:— Bombay City 10, Surat District 5, Nasik District 34, East Khandesh District 5, Poona Town 3, other places in Poona District 24, Satara District 14, Belgaum District 41, Dharwar District 39, Bijapur District 7. Hyderabad Town 2, Kathiawar Agency 34, Kolhapur and Southern Maratha Country States 166—Total 384.

TIRED.

WORN-OUT AND RUN DOWN.

That's what many of us often find ourselves and are so often unable to find the cause. We grow fagged out over the ordinary day's work, listless and lifeless without any reason devoid of energy or ambition nights are passed sleeplessly. The appetite grows poor, we have no desire for work or even pleasure. Then come troubles of the nerves, the head, the stomach, the liver, bowels, blood, in fact the system is undermined. This wrecking at the system is appalling—but we are all liable to it any time just the same. Blood and nerve diseases are silent and insidious, they come without warning and do deadly work almost unnoticed. At the very first sign of the smallest symptom of such troubles, use that KING OF ALL REMEDIES.

ROYAL YAKUTI.

(ANANG VILAS.)

THIS YAKUTI or life-giving nectar has been prepared from the best, choicest and richest vegetable drugs. It has a wonderful property of increasing the nerve power and is a specific for diseases. This valuable medicine is used in large quantities among Rajas, Maharajas and many of our esteemed customers. But we have ventured to give it publication simply with a view to place it before the general public owing to the demand of several friends. It is needless to expatiate upon the magical qualities of this our invaluable medicine. We would not like to blow the French horn as is the fashion of the day, but suffice it to say that the use of this medicine is recommended to those who have any faith in the efficacy of Ayurvedic and Unani medicines. We recommend it also to those persons who desire to tone up the nervous system, to strengthen the body, refresh the memory, and to guard against debility. It works like a charm and the effect is lasting. It restores strength, and it is enough to say that musk is not that which a perfumer admires, it is that which diffuses fragrance of its own accord. Price per tin containing 40 pills, Rupees ten only. Postage extra. No PARDEE necessary.

PNEUMOSAN.

(Amylthiotrimethylamine)

Has stood the test of time and is now extensively used in Great Britain and her Colonies in all types of tuberculosis. It gives far better results than any other treatment specially in Pulmonary, and Glandular Tuberculosis, Tuberculous Joints, Tuberculous Peritonitis and Enteritis, Lupus Vulgaris and mixed infections. Not seldom acute cases too respond to its action. It may be employed with perfect safety since it does not cause any irritation locally or constitutionally.

Dr. John Penn Milton, late Medical Partner to Dr. Otto Walther of Nordrach, Black Forest, Germany, and the Medical Superintendent of the Devon and Cornwall Sanatorium for Consumptives, has favoured with the following observations:

"Some hundreds of cases have been treated so far. The instructive and interesting point about them is the short time that they were under Treatment and that they were able to return to their various business on leaving the Sanitorium. I am getting better results since using PNEUMOSAN than ever before. I would point out that cases in the first and second stages respond best to PNEUMOSAN although I have had good results in more advanced cases, but these results are not to general or so certain. One is Morally bound to take Notice of a preparation like PNEUMOSAN when the Patients all ask for it because they say they feel so much better from its administration and when sees the Improvement in appetite, Temperature, couch and general well being in nearly every case."

PNEUMOSAN is issued in bottles containing 20 to 30 Injections. PRICE Rs. 13-0 PER BOTTLE.

PNEUMOSAN can be obtained from all the leading Chemists throughout India, Burma and Ceylon or direct from:—

PATHARE PRABHU SAMAJ.

THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL PROGRESS OF THE CASTE.

Presiding at the 23rd annual prize distribution of the Pathare Prabhu Social Samaj, the other day, Mr. Makandrao R. Jayakar, barrister, delivered a stirring address suggesting a number of things that the leaders of the Prabhu community should do for economic and social progress of their caste. He said:—"One of the novel and agreeable features that distinguishes today's programme from all previous prize-distributions is that prizes will be distributed to lady-students, who passed some of the University Examinations last year. This is the first time in the annals of this institution that prizes are going to be given to ladies, and it is an agreeable feature on this account that the Samaj has started a most commendable innovation of giving prizes to those that do not rejoice in its membership. Speaking of the Nayak Memorial Fund, he said those in charge of it should try to erect the building in memory of Mr. Nayak not on or near the Girgaum Road, which is anything but a healthy locality.

"When that building is completed and our poor are accommodated therein," he proceeded, "the next project our leaders should take in hand is that of founding a hospital of our own, albeit on a small scale in the beginning, at least in a hired place. Failing such accommodation, I shall be prepared to spare them a portion of my dwelling house, where they can have four beds at the start. We have got a sufficiently large number of our own medical gentlemen, who can manage it honorarily, some of them being able to attend it from 12 to 4, when they can spare themselves from their dispensaries. It is found that the physical condition of our young men begins to deteriorate at an early period in their lives, while our girls are discovered to be subject to a high rate of mortality when they attain the age of puberty. How we actually stand as a community in different aspects can be best ascertained by holding a census of the caste, which affords a very instructive and guiding force in our march of progress in the world. That progress is ensured mainly through educational attainments which, fortunately, we are privileged to possess both in the case of our boys and girls. Our young men have for long provided themselves with a debating institution, like the Samaj, and, I think, the time has come for our educated sisters to follow suit and establish what I may call 'The Mahila Club' where they will find a suitable place and opportunity to frequently discuss various subjects bearing on their educational and social advancement. Those among them, that can, should start afternoon classes to give instruction to their less enlightened sisters in hygiene etc.,—a task in which, I am sure they will be able to secure a hearty co-operation of the medical men of the community. They may be taught, for instance, to appreciate the sentimentalism manifested by the Parsi ladies in favour of maternity institutions. Bombay has become too congested to be a healthy place to live in, and how far residence in it affects the longevity of our lives may be judged by looking to the great age of which our people live, in a sound state of health, in other places."

CROP REPORT.

The following summary of the Season Reports of the various Districts of the Presidency for the week ending 15th September 1914 was published in Thursday's Bombay Government Gazette:—

There was good beneficial rain during the week throughout the Presidency, except in Kanara where it was heavy and injurious to crops in one taluka. More rain is still needed in Satara, four talukas of Ahmednagar, five of Poona, one of Sholapur, Belgaum two of Karachi and in the Deserta tract of Thar and Parkar. Standing crops were generally in good condition but they were slightly damaged by rats in two talukas of Karachi and one state of Rewa Kantha, by rain and adverse winds in Sukkur, and by locusts in three talukas of Thar and Parkar. Harvesting of kharif crops has commenced in Panch Mahal, Sholapur, Rewa Kantha and Savantvadi. Sowing of rabi crops is in progress in Larkana, Ahmedabad, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, the Karnatak, Baroda, Palanpur, Rewa Kantha and Kilhapur. The supply of fodder was generally adequate. Agricultural stock was in good condition but was deficient in numbers in Ahmednagar and Poona. Supply of drinking water was adequate. Water for irrigation was inadequate in Poona, Sholapur and Satara. Prices of food-grains have fallen in Sind and the Deccan and were generally steady elsewhere. Quantities purchasable per rupee in Sind and the various tracts in the Presidency proper were as follows:—

	Percentage below normal.
Sind	20 to 47
Gujarat	24 to 48
Konkan	16 to 41
Deccan	20 to 41
Karnatak	28 to 44

The numbers on gratuitons relief for the week ending 12th September were 255 in Bijapur.

Bladder inflammation as well, is cured by Methyloids, the internal antiseptic capsule treatment. They are easy to take and cure quickly without inconvenience. 180—Q 4.

A tyre discovery

IN the Dunlop rubber-studded motor-cycle tyre the Dunlop way of always trying to do better than before has produced an extraordinarily fine thing.

Its bold design at once takes the eye of the expert. Look at the big strong studs. Look at the thickness of the rubber in the tread. Everyone knows how Dunlop tyres have stood up to their work in the big races and trials, and that they have been used by scores of successful riders. These achievements justify the reasons on which the design is founded.

But what may well be called a tyre discovery is the mixing which governs the exact composition of the covers of Dunlop motor-cycle tyres, and which is giving wonderful results with regard to wear-resisting qualities.

In normal circumstances the rate at which rubber is lost by Dunlop tyres by wear is extraordinarily low. As tyre economy is a matter of mileage price, not initial price, see that you have

INDIAN VOLUNTARY AID CONTINGENT.

LONDON INDIANS' OFFER.

Reuter has already informed us that Lord Crewe has thankfully accepted the offer of Indians in London to raise an Indian Voluntary Aid Contingent in connection with the war. The following correspondence passed between Mr. M. K. Gandhi and the India Office in regard to the Indians' offer:—

60, Talbot Road,
Bayswater, S. W.
14th August, 1914.

The Under Secretary of State for India,
India Office,
Whitehall, London.

Sir,—It was thought desirable by many of us that during the crisis that has overtaken the Empire and whilst many Englishmen, leaving their ordinary vocation in life are responding to the Imperial call, those Indians who are in the United Kingdom and who can at all do so, should place themselves unconditionally at the disposal of the Authorities.

With a view of ascertaining the feeling of the resident Indian population, the undersigned sent out a circular letter to as many Indians in the United Kingdom as could be approached during the 30 hours that the organisers gave themselves. The response has been generous and prompt, and in the opinion of the undersigned, representative of His Majesty's subjects from the Indian Empire at present residing in the different parts of the United Kingdom.

On behalf of ourselves and those whose names appear on the list appended hereto, we beg to offer our services to the Authorities. We venture to trust that the Right Hon'ble the Marquess of Crewe will approve of our offer and secure its acceptance by the proper authority. We would respectfully emphasise the fact that the one dominant idea guiding us is that of rendering such humble assistance as we may be considered capable of performing as an earnest of our desire to share the responsibilities of membership of this great Empire, if we would share its privileges.

It may be added that some of those whose names are sent herewith, are already doing work in connection with some of the organisations that are already rendering assistance, and we have no doubt that if our humble offer is accepted, as the news permeates the Indian community, many more volunteers will come forward.

We have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servants,

The letter brought the following reply:—

India Office,
18th August, 1914.

LORD CREWE'S REPLY.

Dear Mr. Gandhi,

Lord Crewe desires me to thank you for your letter of the 14th and to express his warm recognition of your loyal offer of service.

His Lordship desires to accept the offer in the spirit in which it has been made and he has given his earnest consideration to the manner in which the services of the Indian community can be utilised to the best interest of the Empire.

He is disposed to think that it would not be advisable for Indian students to volunteer for military duties. If they enlist in the force which Lord Kitchener is now raising they may not be able to leave it for 3 years' time. His Lordship is very averse to encouraging them, without the sanction of their parents, to take a step which would so seriously interrupt the purpose for which they came to this country, and which might prejudice their whole future. Neither is it possible to advise them to join the Territorial Force as the Establishment is now complete and a long waiting list is already in existence, so that at the present it is impossible to secure enrolment in that Force.

There is however another sphere of public duty not less important for which in this country we are in the habit of depending very largely upon voluntary assistance and this consists in rendering aid to the sick and wounded. The number of this in the present war may unhappily be large, and if that should prove to be the case the military hospitals and military staff may have difficulty in coping with the demands made upon them. It will therefore be necessary to creat temporary and voluntary organisations to meet this emergency. This duty is already being undertaken by a very large number of English men and women in the Voluntary Aid Detachments of the British Red Cross Society, and it is to work of this kind that Lord Crewe would direct your attention.

His Lordship suggests that a Committee should be formed among the Indian residents and visitors in London and that they should undertake to get up an Indian Voluntary Aid Contingent. It is understood that Mr. James Cantlie who has taken an active part in the organisation of the Voluntary Aid Detachments of the Red Cross Society has offered to train and drill an Indian Voluntary Aid Contingent if a sufficient number of persons are prepared to undergo a course of instruction. Lord Crewe notices that several of the signatories to your letter are qualified medical men and if they will co-operate with Mr. Cantile there is reason to hope that the Indian Voluntary Aid Contingent would become one of the most efficient detachments in the Kingdom.

It is of course quite impossible at the present moment to guarantee that the services of the Indian Voluntary Aid Contingent will be utilised in any given direction. If the number of sick and wounded should fortunately not be large the ordinary military and charitable hospitals will be able to deal with them. But the prevalent feeling in this country, which as your letter shows is shared by Indians, is that we ought all to prepare ourselves to render efficient service to the Empire should the necessity arise.

(Signed) CHARLES ROBERTS.

Steps were taken on receipt of the letter of the Under Secretary of State for India, to act upon the suggestion made by Lord Crewe. A meeting of Indians was held at the house where Mr. Gandhi is staying, and a committee was appointed; Mr. Gandhi was chosen as chairman, Mr. M. M. Gandevia as hon. secretary and among the members are: Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, Dr. J. N. Mehta, Mr. Sorabji Shapurji, Major Sinha, Colonel Kanta Prasad, Mr. Bhupendranath Basu, Mr. J. N. Sahay and others.
